HALLOWE'EN PARTY FOR KIDDIES

MATRONS OF DOMINO LINE SCORE AGAIN

By J. W. MARCHBANK

In looking about for broodmares it is always desirable to pay a good deal of attention to matrons that promise to be just the right nick for your stallion; breeders are ever hopeful of finding another such cross as that of Lexington-Glencoe, which produced Norfolk; that of Fair Play-Rock Sand, which produced Man o' War, and many others.

Experts are telling the members of the California syndicate which owns the Kentucky Derby winner Flying Ebony that they should get hold of ten good Sun Briar mares, the good mares of the Domino line, and ten good mares of the Fair Play line, if they hope to add to Flying Ebony's fame as a stock horse. The black son of The Finn and Princess Mary will be standing for the first time in this state next spring and so it is quite in order for suggestions to be made to his present owners.

I haven't any Sun Briar matrons or daughters of Fair Play—though I may get some before long—but as neighbor to neighbor I can say to Mrs. W. C. Van Antwerp and her associates in the ownership of Flying Ebony that I believe I have some of the best female representatives of the Domino line in the country. My mares are by my premier stallion, King Heather, and, as is well known, the "King" is an inbred Domino. Richstrike and other consistent and game performers have King Heather on the distaff side.

A bit of the glamor surrounding imported Bull Dog has been dissipated by the victory of Tintagel in the Belmont Park Futurity. Tintagel is by imported Sir Gallahad III and, as fans recall, Sir Gallahad and Bull Dog are full brothers. There has been what amounts almost to a "rage" for Bull Dog stock lately on account of the success of Coldstream, The Fighter, Little Nymph, St. Bernard and others. His first crop raced last year. But until Bull Dog sends a Gallant Fox to the races and has a grandson of the class of Omaha we figure the older Sir Gallahad is not in any danger of being eclipsed by his brother. It might be worth repeating that Gallant Fox is from a Domino line mare, Celt's daughter Marguerite.

BREAK GROUND FOR LIVESTOCK EXPO BUILDING

More Than Ten Thousand Expected To Attend Brilliant Ceremony One Week From Sunday.

The spacious grandstand of the Town and Country Club track at Bay Shore will be utilized for the San Mateo-San Francisco livestock pavilion ground-breaking celebration on Sunday, November 3.

Supervisor Andrew Gallagher of San Francisco, chairman of the two-county citizens committee; Supervisor Al Witt of Daly City, vice chairman, and Attorney Chas. H. Sooy, president of Agricultural District 1, met with the dog track owners recently and secured the use of the premises.

Mr. Sooy is to wire Secretary Harold Ickes and WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, extending invitations to participate in the dedication ceremonies.

Federal officials in California and State relief heads also will be invited to attend. Supervisor Gallagher said that owners have generously placed their track at the committee's disposal.

Seated in the grandstand the anticipated 10,000 or more visitors will witness Governor Frank Merriam turn the first spadeful of earth signalling the start of grading operations on the $1,250,000 relief project.

Governor Merriam has already given his promise to attend.

Markers with flags will outline the site of the proposed ten-story Agricultural building.

A barbecue pit fifty feet in length is being constructed on which expert cooks will properly prepare the thousands of pounds of beef for the giant barbecue. A program of events to take place on the track is being arranged.

President Sooy reported a statewide response to invitations to participate in the fete.

Schertzinger and Gus Kahn; "Whoa," a rag-time number by Schertzinger and Kahn; "Funiculi-Funicula," old Italian folk song; "Jingle Bells," "The Bells of Saint Mary's and "Rings On My Fingers," a medley; The Quartette. from "Rigoletto," from Verdi's opera.

JUVENILES IN ALAMEDA COUNTY FALL HANDICAP

Some Of West's Leading Sprinters To Compete At Tanforan Tomorrow

The west's leading juveniles will match strides here Saturday, Oct. 26 for the 2 year old championship of the fall season. The occasion will be the running of the Alameda County Handicap at six furlongs with a purse of $2500 added.

The first juvenile fixture of the season—the California Breeders Lassie Stakes—was finished exclusively for California bred fillies. The Alameda is designed for both colts and fillies and does not place any restrictions as to their birthplace. This will permit every good youngster in western training to compete.

Maid of Perth, the stunning Miss which won the Lassie Stakes. will defend her crown Saturday and judging from the way this striking daughter of King Heather and Lady Leighton has been working she will make a strong defense of her laurels.

Calaveras, which is generally conceded to be the best colt in training here, appears perhaps the most formidable rival that Maid of Perth must face. Calaveras, too, is working in fine style.

The fast filly, Molly Lou, which in her lone start ran such a sensational second to Rushing By, is regarded as a real danger Saturday. She is certain to improve off that one race and, as she was only beaten by a slim nose after having blazed out the pace for such a sparkling field of youngsters, there is every reason to suppose that she will be right there Saturday.

Other aces pointing for the engagement included Totness, Rushing By Blaze Home, Fair Quest, Sundad, Fresno, Margaret O'Neil, Berenda and Merced Queen.

THINKS LIFE IS BIG ADVENTURE IF RIGHTLY USED

One of our favorite movie actresses believes that life is a great adventure. Some of our days are so full of interesting happenings that if we had time and knew how to write an entertaining story, we could find ubject matter for many a narrative, right here at home. Most of us are so busy and hurry along failing to see the bluebird right at our very door.

Boys and girls, write about something with which you are familiar, and this told in simple easy language is sure to make a hit.

The second prize, the pen and pencil set also includes a bottle of blue ink.

The third prize is just as nice except there isn't as much of it. Guess what it is, and watch The Record next week to find out if you were right.

PAST PRESIDENTS CLUB HAS MEETING

The monthly meeting of the Past Presidents Club of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, Native Daughters of the Golden West, was held on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Alice Anderson, San Francisco.

After an interesting meeting, delicious refreshments were served at a table decorated in Hallowe'en colors.

Those in attendance included: Mesdames Mary May , Fredereka Volkman, Anne Biggio, Camille Benassini, Florence Hopman, Julia Romer, Emma Schwarz, Evelyn Bemis, Irene Moresco, Helen Meyer Alice Oldham and Alice Anderson.

ABOUT TIME TO CALL FARCE OFF

A number of citizens have propounded the query to the editor as to how this paper stands on the matter of establishing a "Bingo" parlor in our city.

The Record believes the people of Daly City are wearied of being held up to ridicule by the unseemly attempt to foist upon us an institution smacking of petty larceny.

The protests lodged by a large number of citizens at Monday evening's council meeting should show that the people will not stand for any penny ante "rackets" in this community.

The sentiments expressed at this meeting shou'd be sufficient notice on those responsible for fostering a menace of this sort in our midst that they have gone as far as it is safe to go.

The repeated efforts to deposit all sorts of fetid ulcers on our civic doorstep have become well nigh unbearable to the populace. It is high time something is done to accomplish a cessation.

The decent thing to do would be to call this "smelly" affair off permanently and at once by repealing Ordinance No. 194.

Nuff sed!

LIBERAL POLICIES ARE GIVEN WIDE SUPPORT

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Opponents of President Roosevelt are still going along in a hysterical way trying to break down his ever-increasing popularity. One of the wildest of the charges against the chief executive by dividend-obsessed individuals is that his rule is radical, an accusation that has not the least basis in fact.

Monopolists do not like any kind of curbing of their hoggish proclivities and that little quirk in human nature accounts in the main for their highly emotional outbursts. They cannot understand—at least pretend not to understand—the type of mind such as that of the President, which puts first of all the welfare of all the people, not that of an almost infinitesimal segment of the millions living in the United States.

Largeness, no matter how inhuman it may be, appeals to the mentality of the monopolist above all else. A representative of the organization known as the National Security Owners Association, is going about the country attempting to poison the public mind by proclaiming that the administration is violating campaign pledges and ushering in radicalism by the back door.

The spokesman for the opposition to the humane legislation of the administration makes on it, is a feather in his cap by pointing out that we have twice the number of telephones in this country under private ownership, than Europe has under government ownershihp. We fail to see however, that the pouring of profits into the pockets of the overlords of the telephone trust is any help to getting us out of the slough of the depression.

Postmaster General James A. Farley has a way of breaking through the miasmic atmosphere the opposition is trying to create on all sides. He recently said the President is building for the future against the return of the prolonged depression, and that he is writing social justice into history. Farley referred to former President Herbert Hoover as the leader of the opposition, saying:

"The former president takes his place at the head of the procession prating the old hackneyed phrases that tortured our ears during the four Hoover years of inertia and human misery. He personifies the old deal."

With the victory of the Liberals in Canada a unified mining policy may be expected. Newspapers favorable to the party point out that whereas the Conservatives brought about uncertainty and distrust with haphazard policies and a gold tax, the Liberals will lay down a fixed principle upon which investors can go into Canada and develop mining properties with confidence and security. It is predicted the unified mining idea will bring tens of millions of dollars into British Columbia alone.

The Vancouver Sun, a Liberal journal, declares that society owes everyone at least a reasonable subsistence allowance. Furthermore, that the new social conception of every man's right to a basic living is a conception that must be accepted in this age of shortage of work and plenitude of goods. It is pointed out that over and above a basic subsistence for everyone is plenty of room for incentive and ambition.

CITIZEN TELLS COUNCIL "BINGO" PERMIT GRANT "SMELLS BAD"

Continued Attempts To Becloud Issue Invoke Ire Of People Present At Meeting—Harangue Of Non-Citizen Sponsor Of Bingo Ordinance Displeases.

At an adjourned regular meeting of the City Council of Daly City, on Monday evening of this week, the gamut of emotions ran the scale from the sublime to the ridiculous.

The sublime was apparent in the earnest desire of the large gathering of Daly City citizens to protect against the entangling influences of "Bingo" the sanctity and security of their homes and the morals and character of the children of this community and the maintenance of decency therein.

The ridiculous appeared in the persistent and continued efforts of those four members of the council who favored the "Bingo" permit to becloud the issue with statements that an election, as requested by some 436 citizens who signed petitions to bring about an expression of opinion of the people on the matter at the polls "would not settle a thing," and the silly and repeated assertions that no definite result could be accomplished even if a majority of our electors decided in favor of repealing the obnoxious ordinance.

The permit was granted by a vote of four to one, and the ordinance was adopted by a vote of three to one, the member who introduced the ordinance being absent when it was finally adopted..

The discussion was the result of an invitation by post card to those who signed the petition for their presence. The mayor had asked at a previous council meeting for authority to send out such cards, stating he wanted to have a friendly talk with all citizens regarding their wishes in the matter.

It is significant that none of these cards were delivered before the morning mail on Monday, the date of the meetng. Some citizens have asserted cards for them were not delivered until Tuesday, the day after the session. On being chided about the lateness of mailing, Mayor Smith said the cards had been put in the mail on Friday evening of last week. However on being informed that one card bore the postmark "October 31—4:30 p. m." he stated they had been mailed "about 6 o'clock Saturday morning."

CITIZEN TELLS COUNCIL PERMIT "SMELLS BAD"

George Savage said the fact that those attempting to foist this kind of establishment on the community were willing to pay an annual license fee of $4000 "makes it look smokey." He said he did not think the city should go into a partnership of this nature and the council majority had no right to plunge the citizens into it.

The mayor replied that this was an unusual business, which would require extra policing by the city at considerable expense. He said if the business is illegal it has no right here, and if it is legal it could be established and operated for the regular business license fee of $12 yearly under the permit which had beengranted, even though the ordinance fixing the $4000 annual fee should be repealed. He was reminded that if "Bingo parlors" are a legal business they should need no extra policing.

B. J. Adams said that during his stay in southern California he visited a "Bingo parlor" at Redondo Beach and there were approximately 200 people seated and playing at the tables. He stated that of these at least one-half were young boys and girls under age who were lured by bait of a dime with an alleged chance to win $25. Adams said one man told him he had lost more than $90 in three weeks trying to win a $25 prize. He said the operation of the "Bingo" game in this place had resulted in roulette wheels and faro layouts running wide open and that all sorts of gambling was rampant there.

Mayor Smith said if "Bingo" was operated here he was opposed to allowing minors to visit such a place. He claimed the opposition seemed to be directed more against him personally than against "Bingo."

One "Colonel" Berger arose and introduced himself as being interested in the issue.

Berger said he was the original promoter of the late lamented "Bingo" parlor at Bayshore City (now closed by dictum of county authorities) and said that during its operation no minors had been allowed there. This was denied by others present, who had visited the place. Berger said "Bingo" is a legitimate business. He then took up more than a half hour in telling those present how he "came into the picture." He said Mayor Smith told him the $4000 license fee was to be used "to build a public library." (Of course, after a couple of thousand had been spent for extra policing.) He then launched into a tirade of abuse directed against the originators of the referendum petition.

Mr. Miller said he signed the petition and believed the majority of the women of this community were opposed to "Bingo" on account of its influence on our children.

Practically the only person to espouse the cause of "Bingo" was an apparently intoxicated individual who said he signed the petition, but frankly admitted he "didn't know why in h——" he had signed it.

Almost every citizen present who spoke did so in opposition to the operation of any "Bingo" (some said "Keeno") establishment in Daly City. A number became very vehement in condemnation of the granting of the permit.

Mayor Smith repeatedly asserted he did not know if "Bingo was a legal or illegal "game."

John J. Fahy Jr. called attention of the council to the fact that if "Bingo" were declared illegal by the courts those who voted in favor of granting the permit were liable to a felony charge and he asked Mayor Smith if he were not aware of this. The mayor said he believed such to be the case. Fahy then asked why the permit had been granted if those voting for it were in ignorance as to the legality or illegality of the "game." To this query no reply was vouchsafed.

Councilman Fahy (the only member of the council to vote against the granting of the permit and adoption of the ordinance) moved for the second time that the council rescind the ordinance. None of the other four councilmen voiced a second to the motion—hence it failed.

Mr. Adams asked the council members if they did not think it all smells bad." He thought those things all lead to corruption and graft.

It was stated the permit had been granted for a "Bingo" game some time before the ordinance fixing the $4000 license fee and creating a virtual monopoly in favor of those having secured the permit had been introduced and adopted.

In dismissing the meeting, Mayor Smith told the audience the city attorney would deliver an opinion as to the legality or illegality of "Bingo" at the council meeting on Monday evening of next week—OCTOBER 28.

Those interested in protecting the sanctity of our Daly City homes against "small stuff" of this nature should not fail to be present at the City Hall on that evening — NEXT MONDAY.

When a standing vote was asked by a citizen to gain an expression as to whether those present favored having "Bingo" here or not, Mayor Smith glanced at the number who arose and passed it off with the remark: "About thirty-two or thirty-three out of ten thousand seem opposed to "Bingo.'"

Mrs. Madeline Fellows of Niantic avenue and Mrs. Laura Pescaro of Mission street, motored with a group of the grand officers of the Order of Druids, to Pleasanton, Monday evening of this week, where they attended the official visit of the Pleasanton Circle.

BAY BLAST ON LAUNCH PERILS LOCAL RESIDENT

Dives Into Water When He Is Unable To Extinguish Gasoline Explosion

An explosion caused by a leaking gasoline line, last Sunday evening, nearly trapped Martin S. Johnson of Westlake avenue, Daly City, in the engine room of his pleasure cruiser in the vicinity of Angel Island.

The motor stalled and Johnson, with flash light in hand opened the hatch to the engine room, seeking to investigate the trouble. As he did so a sheet of flame caused by gasoline igniting, was sprayed high into the air. The flames scorched Johnson about the face and arms.

The burns are painful, but not of a serious nature.

Johnson sat down in the hatchway, for a moment stunned and shocked by the blazing framework of his boat. He grabbed a blanket and tried to smother the flames. When he saw that it was useless to waste time, he dived into the water after he had wrapped the anchor rope about his body.

Darkness made his rescue more difficult.

The General Frank M. Cox, an army boat plying between Pier 4 and Angel Island put off its course when the captain sighted the cruiser in distress. and rescued Johnson.

The Johnson cruiser burned and then sank.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will long remember that days outing at McNears Point, where they spent a very pleasant day cruising and fishing with a group of friends who motored to that vicinity to enjoy an outing. Mrs. Johnson returned via auto with some friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson had spent the week end on the boat.

At present writing Mr. Johnson is recuperating at his home.

JOCKEY IS TO BE PRESENTED WITH GOLDEN SPURS

Leading Winner To Receive Prize Which Will Be Worth Best Efforts

The jockey who "wins his spurs" at Tanforan this season will have something to talk about—for they will be golden spurs and well worth winning. J. W. Marchbank, directing owner of Tanforan, announced today that he would put up a pair of golden spurs as the prize to go to the leading jockey at the fall meeting, which ends November 11.

Tanforan will revive the custom of offering this traditionally revered emblem of superb reinsmanship, one dear to every rider's heart, and one which has come down through the ages from the days when knighthood was in flower, after a lapse of 34 years.

Dipping back into the California turf's glorious past, the story of the last golden spurs won at Tanforan still makes the oldtimers breathe just a bit quicker when they think of it.

The great Tod Sloan, universally considered the finest saddle artist of all time, had been alternating with the sensational Jockey Clem Jenkins, for the leadership of the 1901 Tanforan meeting. Rivalry was so keen between these two past masters of the pigskin that the Tanforan Jockey Club decided to put up a pair of golden spurs as the prize for victory in the final handicap of the season on the last day. Tod Sloan bought the fast filly The Lady especially to ride in this race and Jenkins was mounted on Eddie Jones, a sterling router who could run all day.

The race was a mile and a quarter but before the field had gone the first eighth the contest had resolved into a duel between Sloan on The Lady and Jenkins on Eddie Jones. The pair fought it out — matched stride for stride in a breath-taking struggle that had the crowd in the packed stands wild with excitement. Down the stretch two flying thoroughbreds came, locked in a terrific struggle, and right at the wire, Eddie Jones won by a scant head—and the golden spurs, emblematic of the nation's riding honors went to Clem Jenkins. The winner's time, 2:04 3-5s, stood as a California track record for many years.

SEAWEED IDEAL INSULATOR

Unexpected virtues have been discovered in the lowly seaweed. When tightly packed it forms an ideal insulating material, keeping out cold noise, water, and even fire. Scientific tests prove that a mat of sea weed half an inch thick is more effective than a brick wall 12 inches thick. The seaweed has besides only one-fourth the weight of ordinary insulating material.

THE DOCTORS ARE RIGHT

Women should take only liquid laxatives

Many believe any laxative they might take only makes constipation worse. And that isn't true.

Do what doctors do to relieve this condition. They use a liquid

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

laxative, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why your laxative should be in liquid form. A liquid dose can be regulated to the drop.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that form no habit even with children. Syrup Pepsin is the nicest tasting, nicest acting laxative you ever tried.

"Look here," said Kerrigan, sitting forward with a slight jounce of decision, "do you mind if I ask if you're making a fool of yourself?"

"No," said Hal, pretending coolness. "Not a bit. But you don't expect me to be an authority, do you? Or do you think I'm such a fool that I make one of myself consciously."

"I s'pose you have to get red-headed," said Kerrigan evenly, "but I'm giving you credit for sense enough not to think your own ideas are the only ones worth anything."

"Thanks," said Hal without grace.

"I don't like butting into other people's business," Kerrigan went on. "The curse of the world is people trying to run other people. And I'm not asking you this for fun, or because I like to hear myself talk."

Hal looked at Kerrigan's complete, quiet gravity and felt the disrespect of being stretched on the bed while his senior sat solicitously forward. He raised himself from the pillows and swung his feet to the floor. "I'm sorry, Colonel. I don't see why you should give a curse about my business. I'm thankful that you do." He'd tell Kerrigan all about it—everything. That might be good to do: perhaps, telling him, his blood and his brain would rouse out of their coma.

Kerrigan began soberly. "If you don't want to tell me what's happened, say so. But if you want to break it out, I want to hear it. And I said 'want to,' not 'willing to.'"

"Colonel, I want to tell you," said Hal, a gentleness on his mind as well as on his voice. "I—I just wanted to wait, that was all. Here—if you'll listen—here's the whole thing: start to —to finish."

Hal told him a story so orderly and simple that he surprised himself—from the first hour in New York, when Larsen had been so sure Barry and Crack were together, from his first sense of something wrong that rode with them in the car through to watching Barry go up the walk to the hotel in Hollywood. And all the while he spoke, Barry sat in shining green satin, holding herself hard on that bed four hundred and more hot miles away, staring darkly into the shabby corner.

"That's it," said Hal in quiet conclusion. "And I can't tell you—can't tell myself—what it was when I saw Crack standing in her room and knew why he could be there. Since then it's been like coming out of fever: you know something's happened inside you but you don't know what. I loved her, I guess—must've. I don't hate her now—don't seem to be able to feel about her at all. I only hate him; and I'd hate him even if he'd done nothing to me, even if he didn't hate me, too."

"So what?" said Kerrigan.

Hal gave a single, flat laugh. "Nothing," he said: "except I'm going to keep my father out of the dirty mess if I have to—if it kills me."

Kerrigan sat down casually and said, "Out of what dirty mess?"

Hal looked at him sharply for a hint of the joke, but there was no joke in Kerrigan's gravely commanding eyes.

"I mean why is it suddenly dirty after Crack comes into it?" Kerrigan explained in a patient, scholastic manner. "You knew she was married. Who did you expect her husband to be?"

"I didn't expect him to be a stealthy, pale louse of a man, watching us, right there making his dirty plans while his—his girl got a prospect ready."

Kerrigan said, "Oh," lifting his head in slight, ironic comprehension. "She made you come to her room last night."

"No," said Hal defensively.

"As a matter of fact, she asked you not to."

"Yes, but—"

"But when you came, she didn't keep you out. When you were inside, she didn't do the perfectly natural thing—throw you through the window or scream for help. That it?"

"When that—that lazy spider came in and locked the door," said Hal; "when he stood there as if he owned her, as if he had me backed into the slimy corner where he wanted me, she never said a word, never made a sound. She went over and sat on the bed and stared into the corner, and I don't believe she even listened. And — G—d, Kerrigan, d'you think I wanted to believe it?"

"Believe what?" said Kerrigan, still gravely waiting. "Mind telling me what's this 'it' you didn't want to believe?"

Hal curbed his miserable exasperation. "I didn't want to believe what I had to believe—that she didn't mind her rotten little husband's catching me; I didn't want to believe that it meant more to her to keep her promise, her rotten bargain with Crack—much more—than to—to—"

"Hal," said Kerrigan in an unmoved patience of voice that left Hal's insurgent anger dangling, "have you thought back? Have you thought of what you have a right to think? I tell you you sound as if you were talking just to hear a noise, sticking up for what you've done just because you did it."

"Stick up!" said Hal, leaning forward to look at Kerrigan from under drawn, incredulous brows. "What the devil d'you s'pose I've been doing for a day and half a night except thinking back? What—" He jerked his head aside, a sound of exasperation breathed in his throat. Think back! As if he needed to, supposing he could. Coming back from Santa Barbara he'd think—and find his rightness twice as strong.

Kerrigan said, politely, "Will you listen to me a little longer?" and waited for Hal to answer.

"Certainly," said Hal, with an ironic inclination of his head.

"She made no secret of being married?"

"No," said Hal. "That wasn't so stupid, either."

"Did she ever want you to leave her alone, ask you to make up your mind to separating—here?"

"Yes," Hal agreed readily. "And of course it was to be expected I'd do it—right away—specially after she'd told me she cared about me."

"Mm," said Kerrigan. "Telling you she loved you made it harder for you; but your telling her shouldn't've amounted to—"

"The point is," Hal interrupted in listless quiet, "she never did care."

Kerrigan started into something vigorous, but he took palpable hold of himself before his breath was full-drawn. And his voice was leashed to some fragile stanchion of patience as he said: "All right, she didn't care. But it's not impossible to think of somebody in her place who would've. Take another girl then, with a built-in feeling about a promise to her dying father. She's got warm, quick blood in her veins, not New England spring-water. She falls for a fella as she never expected to—a fella in just your position. She wants to find some way out for both of them, and she wants to keep him out of harm. But she isn't any more super-human than she should be; she's made of flesh and feeling, weakness and desire—not billiard-ball composition and missionary tracts.

"But She Is Not 'Appy—Not at All."

"I s'pose she should've told you it was Crack she was tied to, right at the beginning. That would have made everything simple, wouldn't it? You could've wrung his neck in Iowa somewhere and gone to jail with the happy knowledge that you'd made everything perfect for both of you."

"I couldn't've bought him, could I?" said Hal, his hot tone just off trembling. "Wringing his neck would've been the only thing in the world to do."

"Sure you could have bought him," said Kerrigan. "And he'd have stayed bought, too—never bothered either of you again. You could have bought him, and a dead man's dread of shame and a last promise and fifteen or twenty years of love and care and teaching. And with all that bought and paid for, she wouldn't feel that somebody'd shoveled dirt all over her in a thing she wanted kept decent."

"She certainly kept it nice and clean this way," said Hal, with a half laugh that somehow turned its taint back on himself.

"Of course it's she that's done everything," Kerrigan agreed. "To her this thing was all like the plot of a book she'd just finished; she knew what was going to happen; no excuse for her making any mistakes. Human beings don't make mistakes." Hal drew breath to interrupt, but Kerrigan tightened his calm as he went on, "You remember a time when we three were at lunch somewhere and she asked you if you were Frederick Ireland's son?"

"Oh, yes," said Hal drily. "There was some special innocent reason why she wanted to know, too, I remember."

"You told her you were Ireland's son. Did she ever show any sign of thinking you'd lied to her?"

Blandly Hal shook his head and said, "Quite the opposite."

"So then she told Crack you were Ireland. That's what made it so easy for you to bluff Crack, I s'pose."

Hal was scared then and he knew it; but there was still the necessity of getting away whole from the room before he beat down these swarmings of fear.

The chill in Kerrigan's voice began to warm ominously now as he went on. "You come into Barry's life with enough sense—after a while—to know what she is: lovely as morning, brave as a bullet, honorable as a sword, chaste as water. You have the criminal luck to make her fall in love with you—the one thing that could happen to make her life about ten times harder to handle.

"What do you think about then? About the help you can give her? About the way you can bring her to her happiness, as well as yours? About the honor and conscience and courage that's in her even to try to fight a thing she'd go to hell to get? No! You think about how unfair she is to you. You think you ought to walk in and wipe out twenty years of her father in a week, with the honor of a last promise to boot. You think she ought to see that your happiness is all that counts, all that makes the world fit to grow little apples in.

"She puts up with that—for the only reason under God's sky there could be for putting up with it. And you drive ahead between your blinders till you drive on to the last edge of the one thing she hoped to keep you out of. And when that one thing happens too, what do you do? Like a shot. You leave her to stew. You let her kill her own heart so that you'll go on your way; and you go on it. Go on it with your head full of the most important thing in the world, a fundamental of all decency outraged, all good in everything ended—because you, you were made to look like a fool for a few days in another man's little mind. Ireland, you ought to lie down on that floor and die."

Hal's teeth were clenched terribly upon red anger, curdling shame, panic; and he turned so that Kerrigan shouldn't see those things stinging into his eyes. For an instant he thought he could keep his voice unshaken—in a cool, ironic smoothness that would wither Kerrigan. "So she had it happen," he said; "she had Crack catch me there—so that I'd be free, so that I'd—" The urgency of his despair came thick into his throat, and he broke off.

Kerrigan's stillness filled the room—cruel, steady, incriminating; and Hal had to keep his scalding vision on him so that something shouldn't snap in his head, a signal for madness. The brown eyes watching him could never have been warm, never friendly, never merciful; frozen in accusation, personality was gone from them—even the personality of contempt. Dread braced itself hard in Hal as Kerrigan rose, a judge at Doomsday, with the extinct cigarette far from incongruous in the corner of his merciless lips.

"Vain," he said quietly: "Vain, stuck-up, self-indulgent, flabby, without faith except in the importance of money. Why did I think you weren't so cheap?"

The last word lashed Hal to his feet, and it took all his quivering strength to force definition upon the thick words that came of themselves: "Kerrigan, you're a liar. A G—d-d—d liar! And if you were young—" Something was strangling him inside his throat.

It was as if torture, finally released upon him, came to full impact upon the numb obstinacy of his faculties, with a tautly balanced rocking to show that something must plunge massively away in the next second. Hal found his desperate voice again, and in a quicker anger he cried at Kerrigan: "You're right. It's true—every rotten word of it's true."

He went to Kerrigan, took his big arms above the elbow, and sank his forehead awkwardly to the bulky shoulder. "Heaven forgive me," he said in the calm of an exhausted breath. "You, Colonel, you've got to forgive me, you—" He rolled his head a little against the shoulder for want of any words, then let it rest there.

In a moment Kerrigan's hands came up under Hal's elbows and moved them gently. "I'm glad you didn't like it any better'n I did," he said, his voice low, untriumphant—deeply comforting around an odd sort of humility.

Like a divine intercession to spare them both an impasse of embarrassment, the telephone bell broke into startled clamor, and Hal went to it without looking at Kerrigan. It was Sister Anastasia—ready now to go.

"You'll call Barry up, Colonel," Hal said quickly. "To be sure she's there. You'll keep her there: do anything, tell her anything to keep her there safe till I can get to her, till"—Hal's voice lowered to a pitch of bitter shame—"till I can kneel in dirt to her."

Kerrigan nodded, saying hurriedly, "Yes, but move: get back soon's you can."

"Six hours outside," said Hal, glancing at his watch. "Back by midnight sure. And, Colonel, look—do anything, anything to me, but don't ever talk to me like that again, will you."

"D'you spec I could, even if I ever had to?" he said softly.

When Hal got to the place where Sister Anastasia was waiting, he felt he was somehow serving Barry in disciplining himself to the nun's service.

Anastasia's eyes were reticently animated. She said:

"I did not know when I telephoned you: they 'ave told me there is a train to Santa Barbara in twenty minutes; and they 'ave given me money for my ticket, from my brother."

"Ah, but sister," said Hal in sincere reproof, "I was so happy to take you myself. I want to."

"I was 'appy, too," she said, keeping her eyes from him till she'd said it. Then, looking up at him with tranquil sureness: "But she is not 'appy—not at all. You can do something for 'er—now, tonight—instead of taking me on this long journey."

Hamburg Steak Is Good Choice in Preparing Very Quick Meal

Hamburg steak is a good choice for the meat at a quick meal. The easiest and quickest way to cook it is to season the meat and form it into one flat cake. Place this under the broiler or in a hot oven. When it has browned take it out and sprinkle with finely minced raw onion. If it is baked in the oven the onion may be put on top before cooking and browned.

Another way of seasoning Hamburg steak is to make it "white with salt, black with pepper, yellow with mustard" before cooking. I am suggesting rice instead of potatoes to serve with the meat.

Rice can be cooked in about twenty minutes. After it is drained it may be stirred into a frying pan containing about two tablespoonfuls of melted bacon fat and a quarter of a cup of minced green pepper. It should be stirred with a fork over the fire until heated through.

New cabbage, shredded, will cook in boiling water in about ten minutes. Be sure not to cover it while cooking. It is good dressed with a little cream or top milk after it has been drained.

Grape conserve is a favorite winter jam, and if you get an opportunity to buy a basket of grapes at a reasonable price you will get full value for your money, for grape conserve and buttered toast are an unbeatable combination.

The ever-popular dill pickle is one which is usually made in large quantities, but there is really no reason why they cannot be made in smaller lots, if desired.

Dill Pickles.

Grape leaves
Bunch of dill
Cabbage leaves
1½ gallons water
1 lb. coarse salt
1 peck 6-inch cucumbers

Add salt to water, bring to boiling point, skim. Scrub cucumbers, dry, put layer in bottom of crock, add layer of grape leaves, then bunch of dills. Repeat until all cucumbers are used, and cover top with cabbage leaves. Put ten-pound weight on and fill with brine. Cover and let stand until cucumbers are transparent and light in color—two to three weeks.

Indian Curry Sauce.

3 white onions
3 tablespoons curry powder
½ tablespoon ground mixed spices
1 can tomatoes
1 cup stock
½ green pepper
½ lemon

Use heavy kettle if possible. Brown chopped onion in the oil. Add remaining ingredients, except lemon, and allow to simmer gently all day until cooked down to the consistency of a sauce. Last half hour add the lemon chopped fine. Place in glass or stone crock, cover and store. Serve with lamb, chicken, ham.

Pumpkin Chips.

2 lemons
1 green ginger root
1½ pounds granulated sugar
⅔ cup water, if needed

Remove outer skin and seeds and cut rind into stripes about one inch wide. Cut strips crosswise into thin chips. Place the chips in a deep dish with alternate layers of sliced lemon and sugar. Allow to stand twenty-four hours. Add the water and ginger and cook gently until the pumpkin is transparent and tender and sirup like honey. Pour into hot jars and seal with paraffin. Serve with fowl and cold meat.

Mayflower Became Barn, Says Retired Sea Captain

Historians have long tried to learn what became of the Mayflower, the ship that carried the Pilgrim fathers to America. An old retired sea captain, Henry D. Smith, of Atlantic City, declares that on a trip to London years ago, he learned of a tradition believed to be true that the old ship came to an ignominious end. After being tied up at Plymouth Rock a long time, serving no useful purpose, farmers of the struggling colony dismantled it and pulled the hull ashore. Doors were cut into its sides and it served as a stock barn for their cattle and pigs.

What a shrine this old vessel would be now had it been preserved. Also it would make it possible to check on its capacity, which, judged from the number of persons who came over in it purportedly, must have been unusually large for a ship of that time.

Great Victory For Liberalism

Canada's election was, by all and any odds, a tremendous Liberal victory from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

The savagery with which the Canadian people thrust a new Liberal government into office is as much a warning for Liberlism as a triumph for it.

For the fact might just as well be faced that unless the Liberals buckle down to the job of giving this country real government, the same public sentiment that put them into office will just as determinedly throw them out of it.

This is a new era and a new age. It requires new methods and new principals.

The very fact that new political groups have evolved during the past few years demonstrates the vague awareness in the public mind of the changes that are occurring, although no group has been able to define on the platform just what those changes are.

The politics of the future are CHEAP MONEY and TECHNOLOGY.

Five Solialists for the whole Dominion prove that Canadians won't have Socialism. In fact, the two most pathetic prophets in this Dominion today are H. H. Stevens with his one seat and Doc Telford with his seven.

But governments can no longer pile up deficits, nor throttle public and private enterprise by permitting the wages of money to eat up the wages of men.

Governments can no longer sit and wring their hands while machines get men's jobs and the fruits of technology are piled up in warehouses and are not distributed to the masses.

The job of government, then is twofold:

1. To release money and credit at cheap workable rates for public and private enterprise.

2. To release dammed-up surpluses of foods and goods, produced by technology, to the people.

Nothing else than accomplishment of these two essential tasks will constitute good government, no matter what political label government may assume.

There are certain urgent and expedient steps that must be taken by Mackensie King:

1. The immediate formation of a good cabinet prepared for action.

2. The refunding of federal, provincial and municipal loans at a maximum of 3 per cent for at least 5 years.

3. A provincial conference to simplify taxation and define responsibility in the matter of unemployment relief.

The swing to radical expression in the West is partly explained by the unbalance of trade between East and West.

British Columbia, for instance, buys $58,000,000 from Central Canada, while they buy only $8,000,000 from us. This must lead to definite political cleavage in Canada unless it is soon balanced.

Canada has demanded Liberal government. Liberal government will have to apply TECHNOLOGY and provide CHEAP MONEY if it is going to survive.

This, then, is no time for four-hour conferences and academic speeches.

If Mackenzie King and the Liberals are going to stay in office, they must make up their minds to stop being intellectuals and ACT.

THE PUBLIC MIND

87 Cavour Street, Daly City, Calif.
October 21, 1935.

To the Honorable Members, City Council of Daly City:

Gentlemen:

Although I am a new resident in Daly City, my first impressions of it are such as lead me to respond to your circular on city improvements received with the water bill for September. I am responding because I have been made to feel welcome by my neighbors and by my students in the high school and because the opportunity for making civic improvements in Daly City is obvious to a newcomer. At the same time my confidence in the sincerity with which you issued the circular has been strengthened by your action in ordering the city attorney to proceed to legally abate the dust nuisance arising to the west of the Jefferson High School.

From the article in the Daly City Record of August 30, 1935, I learned that the civic improvements, listed in the circular, had been voted down at a special election held August 24, 1935, just before I came to Daly City. The article in the Daly City Record suggested that the election was lost because the people could not express themselves on each item separately, and because the city's share in the cost of the improvements would have raised taxes fifty-five per cent. The circular stated that sixty per cent of the eligible voters refrained from voting, and that if the election had carried, the per capita tax levied by Daly City would still be less than any levied by the nearby cities of South San Francisco, Burlingame, San Mateo, and Redwood City. It would seem to me that a good case can be made for the tax increase involved, provided the improvements themselves are worthy. First, the resulting city tax would not be excessive when compared to those of neighboring cities; secondly the city stood, and may yet stand, to gain three or four fold by the addition of funds from the federal government, and thirdly, the plan avoids indebtedness and interest charges.

The improvements all seem worthy in themselves, though not equally urgent. Certainly the southern section of the city needs water mains and fire alarm boxes; the city needs efficient fire protection everywhere, and the jail and city hall improvements are well justified, as well as being the least expensive improvements on the list. An especially strong plea should be made for modern progressive library service, not only in a new fireproof center, but also in branch libraries in each neighborhood, working closely with the schools. When it comes to large expenditures for park developments and new auditoriums, besides remodeling the Vista Grande School as a community center, however, I would go slowly until I knew that these features fitted into a practical, city-wide plan for recreational developments. If such a plan does not yet exist it should be made at once, in order that it might be aided by federal funds before they are no longer available. Daly City has several neighborhoods, roughly centering in the several schools. Although the school plants are governed independently, nevertheless the school trustees will encourage proper community use of their plants after school hours, under reasonable financial agreements. It is questionable that the city should erect buildings to house gatherings of citizens which would not be permitted in school buildings, which already belong to the people.

In closing I suggest that the voters be given another opportunity to vote on civic improvements. If, after canvassing the situation for obtaining Federal aid, the city council finds that it must guarantee city contributions within a few months in order to obtain such aid, then naturally the election should be rushed. If, however, federal aid cannot be obtained in the near future, the propositions may as well come up at the next regular election. It would seem wise to present the improvements as separate propositions so that all may not be lost on account of dislike for one or more of them. If federal aid proves not to be available at all, nevertheless the city council has a duty to push for the accomplishments of improvements as rapidly as tax receipts will permit on a rate equal to that of our neighboring cities.

In this connection I would have been much interested to see the tax rate per hundred dollars of assessed valuation for Daly City in comparison with those of the nearby cities. It is likely to present a different impression from the comparison of the per capita rates. If the tax rate for Daly City is as much below that of our neighboring cities as the per capita rate seems to be, then many improvements could be made in the course of five years without resorting to bonding, simply by bringing our tax rate into line with those of our neighbors.

Trusting that you will pardon so lengthy a communication from a newcomer, who believes that his duties as a citizen begin with his home city, I remain,

Very respectfully yours,
DAVID L. GREENE.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." These words from James comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, October 27, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Probation after Death." Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself;" (John 5:25-26).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Sciene and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "If the change called death destroyed the belief in sin, sickness, and death, happiness would be won at the moment of dissolution, and be forever permanent; but this is not so. Perfection is gained only by perfection. They who are unrighteous shall be unrighteous still, until in divine Science Christ, Truth, removes all ignorance and sin" (p. 290).

Good Lighting starts with Proper Lamp Design

Here is the 1— 2— 3— of a Better Lamp for Better Light

1 — Higher standard than the ordinary lamp. 19½ inches from table top to bottom of shade.

2 — What a difference under the shade! The diffusing bowl which eliminates both reflected and direct glare to give light that is soft and glareless.

3 — The shade open at the top and wide at the bottom is the third reason why this revolutionary lamp gives six to ten times as much light as an ordinary lamp.

SEE that the lamps you buy for your home are designed to give you abundant light from proper height and distance so that it is easy for your eyes to see quickly and to read without effort.

Note the distinctive features of the Science of Seeing Study Lamp pictured above. They are the tall standard, the diffusing bowl and the special shade wide at the bottom to give much more useful light than ordinary lamps.

LEAGUE OPENER WON BY LOCAL BASEBALL CLUB

Feiber Fans Ten—Petrocchi And Vasquez Excel at the Bat — Musante And De Filippo Fielding Stars.

(By Al Gould)

The Daly City Tanforan nine opened their Recreation "AA" Winter league schedule with a well earned victory over the Lyon Auto Company club on the Harrison diamond last Sunday afternoon.

Lefty Feiber, formerly a member of the Chicago White Sox, was on the mound for the local club. If this lad's exhibition of twirling in sending ten of the opposing batters down by the strike out route and allowing only six scattered hits is a sample of his work, much may be expected in the future.

Johnny Vasquez, popular local shortstop, connected for home run, a single and scored two tallies, sharing the batting honors with Daly City's own "Lola" Petrocchi, who smashed out a double, two singles and scored three runs.

De Felippo and Musante excelled in fielding, and young Musante connected for two singles and scored one run. Not a bad beginning with the local club.

Play by play report:

JEFFERSON HI RUNS OVER SANTA CLARA

The Jefferson Indians collected all their weapons and used them for laying out the fighting team of Santa Clara.

When our boys saw the bleachers packed to capacity, Friday, they clicked. Some of our plays were not so good as Santa Clara's, but when there is support and spirit in the team and the students, a team cannot help but win.

The second string, which played during parts of the second, third and fourth quarters, were: Rose, Stansbury, Flick, Giusti, Lowenthal, W. Wilson, Van Pelt, Biggio, Bontempi, and Simpson.

There were four touchdowns made and one touchback. Norbert Pfeifer made the first and fourth touchdown; Earl Bolster made the second touchdown; Harry Rose made the third touchdown; and Kendal Van Pelt made the touchback.

It was a good game, because sportsmanship was shown by both teams and students. The game ended with a score of 28 to 6 in Jefferson's favor.

By popular demand the daring continental stage revue, French Folies, is now playing a return engagement for another week at the RKO Golden Gate Theater.

A number of new features are being presented for this week and include the Sampson and Delilah and Manhattan Serenade spectacles as also some new comedy and songs and the exoctic, original Parisian balloon dance that startled all Europe.

Bonite; Lester Hardine; Joe Cowan; Sam Critcherson; the many beautiful mannequins and dancing demoiselles. The giant double stage with twenty-five mammoth scenes is again pleasing audiences.

The Girl in the Goldfish Bowl identified with French Folies is also on view in the lobby showing a live girl, five feet tall, in an eight inch goldfish bowl.

The screen features are the Baffling "Spanish Cape Mystery" Twelvetrees, Donald Cook, Jack LaRue, Berton Churchill and large supporting cast and an additional screen scoop, "Camera Thrills," with hair-raising events in the lives of news reel camera men.

Shorthand Certificates Awarded

Several girls have passed the official Gregg Writer examination, according to Miss Dorothy Smith, instructor. The students who were awarded a Complete Theory Certificate by the Gregg Company were: Florence Burr, Doris De Vincenzi, Dorothy Kink, Anita Kahle, Olga Lanza and Josephine Parodi.

The outstanding grades were those of Dorothy Fink, who received 97½ and Josephine Parodi, who received 97. All students must make a grade over 90 to receive one of these certificates.

This test consists of a hundred of the most difficult words in shorthand, and is dictated at a certain rate of speed. The students are given a limited time to transcribe their shorthand notes.

World's Most Famous Babies Eat Oatmeal

The Dionne Quintuplets, wards of the King, eat the same cereal that is eaten by millions of babies who don't get their names in the papers—oatmeal. The Canadian government chose a staff of special experts for the care of the Quints. And these experts, their scientific knowledge endorsing the instinctive choice of mothers the world over, have chosen oatmeal for the cereal of the famous five.

Oatmeal, eminent medical authorities agree, has an abundance of everything a child's cereal should have—body-building minerals, muscle-building protein, and the supremely important Vitamin B for keeping fit.

Food science says that Vitamin B is the best safeguard against those dangerous enemies of childhood—nervousness, constipation, and poor appetite due to lack of that vitamin in the diet.

Now It's Rat Fur

It needn't be a matter for surprise if you learn that some new curly fur on the market with a fancy name came from an animal the ancestors of which are traceable to the common rat. For a curly-coated variety of these rodents has been developed at Wistar Institute, the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, by Dr. Helen Dean King, who has been making a study of the breeding of rats for scientific purposes. Among her rats are breeds with chocolate, cinnamon and pale lapin colored coats.

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen limbs; feel nervous, miserable—all upset.

Don't delay! Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by grateful users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this — and see that you get what you want.

WEDDING UNDER EVENING STARS

"Since you have a San Francisco license the wedding ceremony must be performed in that county," said the minister.

"How happy we would be if only you will come and do it for us," they pleaded.

Soon the minister was dressed and they were on their way. Coming to Junipero Serra boulevard and Sagamore street, they found a well-lighted corner at an oil station. Hats were removed and the solemn ceremony began. As the minister said, "We are gathered together here in the sight of God, and in the presence of these witnesses," etc., San Francisco's thousands were sleeping and slumbering. As he said, "Mr. Hugh Campbell Lyon, wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife," and "Miss Dorothy Claire Murray, wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband," etc. their firm replies, "I will," were met with crispy puffs of north wind. As the ring was slipped on the bride's finger, the stillness of the early morning hour was undisturbed. As the minister pronounced a blessing upon the newly weds in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, millions of stars twinkled and contributed light to help make their new pathway a bright one.

The newlyweds, formally of Post street, speeded through the wee hours of the early morning toward Fresno, where the groom is employed.

Reverend J. Merritt Gill says he prefers day light or evening weddings. But since he promised God he would go where He wanted him to go and do what He wanted him to do, he expects to be faithful at his task.
